

In Egg Beater No. 4, Stuart Davis shows us how any seemingly common domestic item can be transformed into a rhythm and color symphony. One of a series of “Egg Beater” paintings, it shows his intense involvement in Cubist tenets augmented by an unmistakable American touch. The beater is dissected into angular lines and strong shapes, in clashing colors as crisp and bright as in a trumpet riff. STUART DAVIS 1930